

HUMANOIDS

FROM THE DEEP

they surface to slay

A young swimmer is mangled by an unknown horror lurking in the briny deep.

S LIMY!
CALEY!
EA-THINGS!!!

Up from the depths of the ocean floor they rise, these phantoms from the mysterious fathoms deep beneath the surface of the sea.

Gilled, webbed of hand.
Bulbous of eye.
Exposed of brain.
Murderous of intent.

* * *

The sleepy fishing village of Noyo is the future site of a cannery.

Hank Slatery (VIC MORROW) is a businessman who welcomes the new jobs the cannery will provide.

Jim Hill (DOUG MCCLURE) is a community leader.

Excitement comes to the little town annually when a salmon festival is held. But this year something is wrong; something terrible is going on.

Guard dogs are found dead.

A pair of lovers disappear in the sea.

The mangled body of a young swimmer is washed ashore.

One night a boy is mauled and lives to tell the tale of his attackers: they're amphibious monsters!

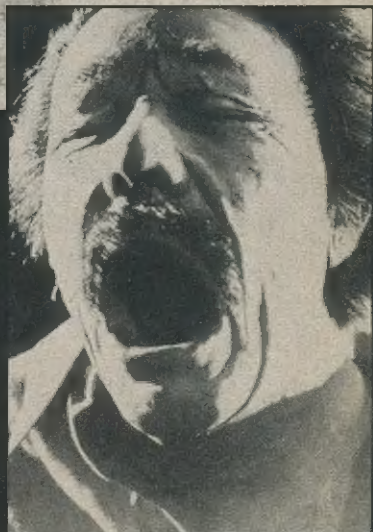

A marine biologist, Dr. Susan Drake (Ann Turkel), finds the key to the mystery of the marine monsters. Things that once were fish have, like the manimals of the Island of Dr. Moreau's Lost Souls, evolved at a speeded-up rate of evolution to a grotesque stage of aquatic humanoids!

Panic and terror seize the town as the Humanoids from the Deep take to the land and attack!

The villagers unite against the gruesome marine menace.

"Horror, fear, suspense & the unknown are carefully welded together," the producers tell us, "to produce sheer terror." They promise "a shock ending that will have hearts pounding!"

Warning: Keep your mouth shut while viewing this film—the heart that leaps into your throat may be your own!

A fishy fiend has got him and his seconds are numbered!
